FR. BEN'S COLUMN

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness." Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776.

In May 1993, I flew from Dublin to New York and then to Dayton, Ohio. This was my very first trip to the United States, and I was here to take part in a summer program at the University of Dayton. Flying over Ohio, I was surprised at how flat it all was. I thought Ohio was like the Pacific Northwest, covered in great forests, wide and fast rivers, vast lakes, mountains and valleys. I expected a wilderness with occasional settlements, some cities, few roads, and fewer people. To be honest, my image of the land came from the James Cooper 1826 novel, Last of the Mohicans. I figured Ohio was next to Kentucky, so it made sense to me that it would be a green paradise.

A number of things struck me when I got here: how friendly and kind the people were and how polite, how welcoming and accepting people were, how appreciative the people were and how generous and big-hearted people were.

I only realized how vast the country is when a few years later my parents came to visit me when I lived in Dayton. I made a trip with my parents from Dayton to the Outer Banks by car, stopping in Washington, DC overnight. I can't believe that my dad and I could be in a car that long together and both of us survived.

To give you some scale, the country of Ireland would fit into the State of Ohio and there would be room left over. In the time it takes us to travel from Cincinnati to Cleveland, we could drive from the top of Ireland to the bottom of Ireland – if you had decent roads, that is.

Another thing that struck me was that the continent of North America and the country of the United States is so spacious and vast, one single time zone is not enough to account for the passing of time in this great land. It is surrounded by oceans and has lakes as big as some seas, it has mountains, and valleys, it is comprised of many nations, and gives a home to peoples of every nation, language, culture, and color. It is so vast at the one time it experiences snow and beaches, tremendous heat and sub-zero cold, forests and prairies, swamps and deserts. It is at once new and vibrant and at the same time makes the past and tradition a living presence and reality. All of this is present, here and now, in this one nation and this one people.

But as amazing as all this is, it is not the most impressive thing I have experienced in the United States. I guess what has struck me most about the United States is the people, which give the nation its character, its vision, and its attraction to the peoples of the rest of the world. Certainly, people are people, and there are good and bad, and many characteristics of the people here are shared by people everywhere: things like generosity, kindness, hospitality, concern for others and for the world, a sense of pride in our culture.

FR. BEN'S COLUMN CONTD.

However, what I see as unique is the character of a people who absolutely and confidently believe in themselves, a people who see human value as something that is inherent, given by God, and not handed down and not bestowed, from another as a privilege. You are a people who don't live by another's leave or good will, but a people who believe in your own right to freedom, self-determination, independence. You are a people who believe that no man, or the state, or the government, no king, emperor, despot, or president, no congress or senate, but that Almighty God has bestowed on you individual freedom. You believe that the individual is the source of human authority bestowed on another, or the government, for the good of all. Yet, that authority is not given away, not traded for the things of this world, the promises of the elite or the will of the powerful. You believe that all people are equal, and as the Rev. Martin Luther King said, the only aristocracy in the United States should be an aristocracy of character. Character is about who we are, what we do, and how we live. You are citizens and not subjects.

Self-reliant, but working together, independent but willing to share everything with everyone, powerful but humble, determined and compassionate, honest, straightforward, lovers of peace but willing to sacrifice everything for the sake of the weak and the vulnerable, this is what I have found in the character of the people I have encountered in my thirty years living among you.

Because people are people and not angels, we can always fall back into the old ways, and we can either hand our freedoms over or have them taken from us by new aristocracies. But it seems to me that in 1776 a word was spoken on behalf of all freedom loving people and all people who desired a new world and the freedoms to live life as they wanted, and that word was liberty. Independence meant "liberty." Liberty from the old world, the old ways, and liberty to build a new life and a new way. We have inherited that liberty, and our future liberty depends on how we safeguard our liberty now, today, in this generation. I think that is what we celebrate on the 4th of July. It means independence from all those who would steal from us our liberty. Our liberty is not preserved by the government; it is defended, protected, and guarded by "we the people."

In the Gospel today, it is His own neighbors who fail to recognize Jesus because familiarity breeds contempt. We can fall into the same failing. Having been blessed for so long with so much, we can forget the source of our blessings and the purpose for which God has given them. Let's not be like the crowd and fail to recognize who has given our nation such great blessings. Let's not fail to have every one of our citizens, all our people, share in these blessings and let's not fail to know that God desires us to share with others the blessings He has bestowed on us.

IN MEMORIAM

RITE OF CHRISTIAN INITIATION OF ADULTS – RCIA
RITE OF CHRISTIAN INITIATION ADAPTED FOR CHILDREN

Our RCIA process continues year-round. Because of this, adults and children can begin at any time. Most who come to the Catholic Church as adults do so because God has called them through other people. If you know someone who may be interested in the Catholic Faith, ask him or her to call us, or ask if he or she would like for you to call and make the first "contact." While new inquirers can join the RCIA process at any time, because of our lingering "school year mindset," many people begin to really consider inquiring about the faith as the new school year begins. Now is a great time to reach out and mention becoming Catholic to someone you know who may be considering it! Contact Deacon Mark Bardonaro at 513-471-7741, ext. 415 or deaconmark@stdominicdelhi.org for more information about our Mary Queen of All Saints RCIA process.
