FR. BEN'S COLUMN

“You give them something.”

My grandparents' home was very small and sparsely decorated. In fact, I can only remember three things hanging on the walls of their main living room, a mirror above the fireplace, and on the walls on either side are two colored pictures, one of John F. Kennedy and the other, Jackie. My grandparents were so proud that an Irish American Catholic had been elected president of the United States.

On January 20, 1961, toward the end of his inaugural address, President Kennedy said these incredible words: “And so, my fellow Americans...ask not what your country can do for you — ask what you can do for your country.” His words seem so full of possibility, generosity, and hope. They seem so unselfish, encouraging, and sacrificial. In a way, they are youthful, energetic, and vigorous. The President is speaking to a people he hopes will try to help others first – not themselves – the community, the nation, and the world. In fact, John Kennedy is addressing something that is, or was, part of the character of Americans and America, a self-determination, an individualism, a spirit of independence that didn't look to the government first, but last, if at all. Kennedy's words seem even more incredible today when the refrain of so many seems to be “What is the government going to do for us?” So many seek to provide for their own needs and wants, first and foremost.

Today we have St. John's version of the Gospel reading about “the feeding of the five thousand.” In this version, St. John leaves out a small detail that St. Mark includes in his telling of the same story. In today's Gospel passage, St. John has Jesus ask how so many are going to be fed and then He tells the apostles to have the crowd sit and Jesus blesses bread and fish, and all have enough to eat. In Mark's Gospel, Jesus first says to the apostles “You give them something to eat.”

It was not acceptable to Jesus that the apostles simply send the crowd away to find something for themselves. Jesus demanded that they provide for the crowd themselves. The apostles were not to send the crowd away hungry, like Jesus, they were to feed them, even if that meant giving up all they had, their own meager rations. They were to be personally committed to the crowd, no longer as strangers, but as family, their children, their relatives, their own people. Families eat together, share what they have, and so we see the vast crowd move from anonymous strangers, to being brothers and sisters, the family of Jesus, and, so, the family of the apostles.

We can get into a habit of asking “What about me?” “How am I being provided for?” “What's in it for me?” We can look for what we are owed and that might even be legitimate, just, and fair. Nevertheless, Jesus didn't say to His followers, “Send the crowd away and prepare something for us to eat; after all our work we deserve it.” Rather, Jesus said to His disciples (which includes us), “You give them something to eat.” Another important point in this Gospel message is not simply that if we share what we have we will have enough to go around. As the modernists would have us believe – the miracle is that everyone shared. Rather, Jesus teaches, that if we are willing to sacrifice and give even the little we have for others in God's name, God will bless and multiply our gift so that more than enough, a superabundance, will be provided. Jesus is saying to us that we are to be personally invested, committed, willing to sacrifice. We are called to be generous, to be the givers, to be the youthful generation that creates a community that is hopeful, enriched by our presence, our gifts and our giving, our generosity, and our good will. Every generation is a new generation, and every new generation brings with it potential, possibility and hope. Here at our Family of Parishes, with God's grace and blessing, surely, together we can build a better future, together we can feed the crowd, together we are stronger, together we are better, together we can make a difference for everyone.”
